MULTISENSORY TEACHING APPROACH (MTA)

MTA is an alternative language arts program specifically designed for students experiencing serious reading difficulty, including dyslexia. It is based on Orton-Gillingham philosophy and techniques, and follows the introduction sequence of Alphabetic Phonics.

MTA was field tested for nine years in both public and private school settings before it was published. A four year trend analysis study (Reynolds, V., Vickery, K., and Cochran, S., Annals of Dyslexia, 1987) looking at both reading and spelling in regular and remedial classrooms showed highly significant gains for all remedial students as well as gains for regular classroom students, some also at significant levels.

MTA is a comprehensive language arts program addressing the areas of alphabet/dictionary skills, reading, reading comprehension, cursive handwriting, and spelling. Guided discovery and multisensory techniques are utilized for introducing, reviewing, and practicing skills in the curriculum areas listed above. These techniques involve students as active participants in their own learning process. Criterion-referenced Mastery Checks are administered periodically throughout the curriculum. Mastery criteria are 90% for spelling and reading.

MTA addresses all descriptors of appropriate dyslexia programs as described by the International Dyslexia Association, and those in the Texas Dyslexia Procedures.

MULTISENSORY TEACHING SYSTEM (MTS): A BASIC READING/SPELLING PROGRAM FOR PREVENTING READING FAILURE

The MTS Program addresses both reading and spelling. It is suitable for: Tier 1: Basic instruction for all students in regular K-3 classrooms, and Tier 2: Intervention in regular classrooms or small group tutorials for struggling readers at all levels. It is evidence-based as described in Put Reading First. There will ultimately be three parts to the series.
